"Excerpt from The Japan Advertiser, 15 September 1940"

ARIMA GIVES VIEWS ON NEW STRUCTURE

Prospective Leader of Central Agency Believes
It Will Function Better Than Diet

Declaring that the parliamentary system in Japan has been a dismal failure insofar as expression of the popular will is concerned, Count Yoriyasu Arima, Member of the House of Peers and chairman of the preparatory commission for the establishment of new national structure, told the Nichi Nichi during an interview Friday evening that the proposed new structure will be one in which full scope will be given to the popular will.

Count ARIMA's views are significant, according to the newspaper, considering the fact that the former Agriculture and Forestry Minister is in line for appointment as director of the central headquarters of the new structure. His remarks are quoted by the Nichi Nichi as follows:

"The projected organization of the people will embrace all professional and cultural organizations in the country. Regionally, it will include all organizations in every prefecture, city, town and village. The work of establishing a structure which will permit the people to acquaint the Government authorities with their wishes bristles with difficulties. The Diet system, as practiced in the past, has been a complete failure as an arrangement for the ventilation of the will of the people. The new structure movement is an attempt to remove the accumulated evils of Government by a majority vote and fashion a system under which all subjects of the Emperor will be enabled to assist His Majesty in the conduct of national affairs. Under the new system, the Government, the Diet or the central headquarters of the new national structure will indicate the direction in which the people should tread, with a view to achieving a condition under which the people will act as one man in tiding over the situation confronting the country."

Since word has gotten around that Count ARIMA likely will become either vice-president of the new structure movement or director of its central headquarters, realtors have been approaching him with offers to sell or rent offices to house the new structure and its many subsidiary agencies, according to the Kokumin.

"Such offers are pouring in on me every day," Count ARIMA told a Kokumin reporter. "The owners of certain department stores have offered to lease their buildings for use by the national movement. A man came to me the other day with a proposal that the national movement lease the Mimatsu building in Hibiya. I was interested in his proposition. Further inquiry revealed, however, that the new structure would be obliged to act as agent for the insurance company which owns the building. It so happens that the insurance business is one of my weak points."
